

Jérôme Glorie

POSITION: Director-General

ORGANISATION: Federal Public Service
Home Affairs
DG Security and Prevention

Jérôme Glorie is director-general of the DG Security and prevention of the Belgian Public Service Home Affairs. He has been holding this position since 2003. As a true believer of the added value of an integrated security policy he has orientated the mission and structure of the department to such extent. Mr. Glorie currently also holds the position of Director-General Ad Interim for the Directorate-General Civil Security.

Jérôme Glorie will be presenting the following at the conference:

Secure parking areas which lead to an increased safety it's a beautiful example of an integrated security policy. Through an interactive cooperation between government agencies, in the field of Security and Transportation and diverse private partners and their federations, tailored answers can be found to prevent cargo theft and to increase security for all. Mr. Glorie will outline the Belgian approach on this matter and the current state of play.